ATTEMPT TO COMMIT SUICIDE.-Mr. Henry McCartney, a native of Philadelphia, who has been working at his trade (book binding) in this city for some time past, yesterday, in a fit of temporary insanity made two or three efforts to commit suicide, by drowning himself

The Sentinel gives the following as the rein the canal, at the 10th street bridge. He left his work, and running over to the canal, stripped off his coat and plunged in the water which is about twelve feet deep there. A colored man, (whose name we have not learned,) working around the warf, out a boat loose, and, in it. rescued him. Subsequently, when in the custody of some of his friends, on his way home, he broke from them, and again made for the canal. In his way down he ran against a seedy looking gentleman. and stopping to pummel him was overtaken by his friends, who had followed him in full chase. He was then taken to Dr. Force, who administered sedatives sufficient to quiet him. We learn that he is much better to-day.

Bread Law -The act lately passed by the City Councils, to regulate the weight of bread. went into effect yesterday 1 & officers commenced yesterday to weigh the read at the markets. They say that the weight of bread was all wrong, except in one or two instances. The bread was not too light, but too heavy; and we learn that the Corporation Attorney has decided that giving overweight is an offence. The penalty is confiscation of the bread and a fine of five dollars for every offence.

BACK AGAIN. - On Sunday last, Officers Simonds, Stoddard, and Wise, arrested a man named Butler, who had escaped from the jail at Marlboro', Md., where he was confined to await trial for horse-stealing. One of the officers tells us that this is the second time he has broke jail. The first time he was in for horsestealing, and broke out; and soon after stole another horse and was sent back. A reward was offered for his arrest, but we are told the officers only got four-fifths of it.

PRINCE TAYLOR

A SLAVE CASE IN THE CARS-VIOLENT PROCEEDINGS .- Yesterday afternoon, as the 5 o'clock train was on its way to Baltimore, a scene occurred not expected by the passengers. At the Annapolis junction, Judge Mason, of Maryland, accompanied by Judge Legrand and other gentlemen, got in the cars, and, on the way, Judge Mason discovered a colored man whom he recognized as a fellow who had decoyed some nine or ten slaves from their masters. He told the fact to the conductor, Mr. Owen Humphreys, who overhauled his tickets, and found that the man was properly authorized to travel on the road, was bended for, and had an indisputable right to pass, so far as the rules of the road and the aw was involved. He, therefore, told Judge Mason that he had no authority to arrest him. The Judge remarked that justice should be done, when the conductor informed him that there was a police officer in the cars, who could arrest the "fugitive," as understood, re-sulting in the introduction of officer Busher, to whom Judge Mason made the statement that he had made to Conductor Humphreys. In the meantime, the conductor discovered the fugitive in the private department appropriated to ladies, sitting along side of a white woman, and ordered him out. About this time, officer Busher approached and gently arrested the colored man, saying, "I want you," when the arrested man struck the officer under the left eye, imprinting three of his knuckles in Busher's face, scaring him badly, and bringing the blood. The officer was immediately sustained by the passengers, who endeavored to secure the prisoner, and during the operation, a gentleman, named Stone, had his thumb bitten badly by the furious fellow Great excitement ensued; some of the passensengers making for the negro to kill him, but Conductor Humphreys interfered for the sake of the good order of the train, and so regulated matters that the officer and others succeeded in hand-cuffing the fellow and securing him in the baggage-car. Here he was s.ill irrascible and it required much exertion to make him behave himself. At this stage of matters, two persons appeared and took his part. They proved to be a Mr. Kelly and a Mr. Robertson, of Philadelphia, who interested themselves particularly for the man under arrest. Mr. W. A. Gaddes, of Baltimore, confronted them, and with others assisted the officer On arriving in Baltimore, officer Chisholm was sent for and took the prisoner to the Southern District Watch house, and this morning his trial was to take place, Judge Mason being summened to testify in the matter. On questioning the black fellow, he answered that his name was Dan Thomas, that he was born near Hagerstown, Maryland, and had been for two years past in the employ of Mr. Kelly, the gentleman from Philadelphia, who interfered for him. The white lady who sat beside him in the private cars, he said, was the wife of Mr. Kelly, and he wanted Mr. K. sent for to furnish him with some money. This was at the landing in Baltimore, was Mr. Robertson. Altogether, the case led to the suspicion that they were all slave abductors. The firmness and decision of Capt. Humphreys, and the perseverance of officer
